In the News

- Washington State University's ROAR program has been awarded a $2.3 million grant to continue its work helping students with intellectual or developmental disabilities have a fully integrated, on-campus experience. The ROAR program received the 5-year grant from the U.S. Department of Education's Transition and Postsecondary Programs for Students with Intellectual Disabilities. <https://news.wsu.edu/2020/10/07/wsu-roar-awarded-2-3-million-u-s-department-education/>
- Two College of Education faculty members at Washington State University Tri-Cities have been elected to serve as Association of Science Teacher Education (ASTE) board members. Associate professor Judy Morrison and assistant professor Jonah Firestone both teach and research science education, aligning them well with ASTE, one of only two science education organizations in the country that focuses on research for science teaching. <https://news.wsu.edu/2020/09/11/two-wsu-tri-cities-faculty-serve-national-science-teacher-education-association-board/>
- Two Washington State University professors have won the Society of Professors of Education's outstanding book award for 2020. Last year, A.G. Rud, a distinguished professor of cultural studies and social thought in education, and Sola Adesope, a professor of educational psychology and Boeing Distinguished Professor of STEM Education, released Contemporary Technologies in Education: Maximizing Student Engagement, Motivation, and Learning, published by Palgrave McMillan. <https://news.wsu.edu/2020/09/15/two-wsu-faculty-win-society-professors-educations-outstanding-book-award/>
- Alumna Tori Sharpe, who is a teacher in Vancouver (WA), won high school educator of the year by OnPoint Community Credit Union. As award-winner, she'll have her mortgage paid for a whole year, as well as having a donation made to her school for resources and supplies. <https://education.wsu.edu/torisharpe>
- As part of a $7 million USDA grant, the college's Learning and Performance Research Center, led by Brian French, will be assisting with research and evaluation components of the project. The college's portion of the grant is about $450,000.
